Dementia and Depression are common in older people and may occur separately or together. Correct diagnosis can be challenging due to the number of corresponding symptoms present with both disorders.

This session aims to increase understanding of the differences between early Dementia and Depression to ensure accurate and timely diagnosis and improve outcomes for patients.

Discussion includes:

- Depressive Pseudodementia
- psychopharmacology – prescribing and deprescribing
- stigmas
- the role of the GP specialist in referral and ongoing management.

Speaker:

Dr Rodney Marsh
MBBS, FRANZCP, MFPOA

Dr Marsh is an old aged psychiatrist and works as a consultation-liaison psychiatrist in both public and private settings. He is a committee member of the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists' local Neuropsychiatry section, and has previously co-ordinated the continuing medical education program for Queensland psychiatrists. He regularly lectures medical students, psychiatry trainees, psychiatrists and local neurologists on neuropsychiatry topics.
