There is growing evidence that individuals with mild or moderate Parkinson's disease can benefit from rehabilitation treatment that targets strengthening, flexibility and cardiovascular conditioning. This event will provide GPs and their Practice team with information regarding a comprehensive, multidisciplinary approach to the patient care management of Parkinson's disease.

After this education session, you should be able to:

- recognise the subtleties of Parkinson's disease
- identify patients with Parkinson's disease who might benefit from rehabilitation
- understand the contribution Geriatricians can make towards developing a rehabilitation course for patients with Parkinson's disease
- understand the complexities of patients with Parkinson's disease undertaking rehabilitation.
